HIGH SCHOOL SHOWS POOR FORM BUT TAKES GAME FROM GREENSBURG ON FOUL GOALS

Ab Solsson Makes Majority of Coker Points; Coleman All For Visitors.

CASEYS AND "Y" TO PLAY

The Connellsville high school basketball team won over Greensburg here Saturday night, 27-23, in a game remarkably free from field goals. Plans were much dissatisfied with the contest. The Cokers were very ragged in their playing but Greensburg did not prove to be such a dangerous opponent and Ab Solsson kept his school in the running by making foul goals. Coleman scored every point for the Greensburg organization.

The first half ended 14-12 for Connellsville. The score mounted slowly for both teams, the Cokers generally five points in the lead.

In the first half Solsson made a foul for Connellsville and Captain "Pep" Francis got a field goal in the latter period. Coleman got two goals in the first half and one in the last. He also shot all the Greensburg goals.

MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 7, 1921.

SHERIFF SHAW DID THE RIGHT THING.

Sheriff Shaw acted with commendable courage and promptness when he revoked the commissions of all except his office deputies as a means of preventing further misrepresentation and misuse of authority by persons who had at some time in the recent past been called into service as temporary peace officers.

If the reports reaching Sheriff Shaw which moved him to action can be substantiated and evidence produced that some of the persons previously denominated have engaged in hold-up or other forms of law violation, the sheriff's dismissal order should be the starting point for a very thorough inquiry into the conduct of certain former deputies, to be followed by proceedings. Such a course should be pursued both for the purpose of punishing those guilty or grave offenses and for the further purpose of removing the imputations which, until such action is taken, will rest upon other former deputies who have discharged their duties faithfully and honorably.

Sheriff Shaw has pointed out he had no recourse, in view of the information he had received, but to revoke all commissions in order that there would be no possibility that a single deputy, who had abused his privileges, would be able to continue his appointment as a shield for criminal practices. Naturally the innocent are thus placed in the same class as the guilty, so far as the public is concerned, hence the need to ferret out the guilty in order that they may be punished, and at the same time protect those who are without blame for the conditions which impelled Sheriff Shaw to act first and investigate afterwards.

There is nothing quite so prolific in breeding contempt and disregard for the law, or so stimulating to violations of it, as crookedness on the part of persons clothed with the authority of officers charged with the duty of enforcing the law. Whoever or whenever an official is found who is using his office illegitimately the incumbent deserves and should receive the limit of the penalty provided by law. We have enough crooks without permitting the fraternity to be enlarged or protected by crooked law enforcement officers.

HIGHWAYS AND EDUCATION.

The improvement of the highways of the country is being found to bear such an important relation to education in both the rural and the urban districts that the subject is beginning to receive considerable attention. Not only are educational leaders observing the effects, but progressive citizens in sections where the motor transportation of school children is being encouraged are bearing testimony to the value of good roads as a means of providing better educational facilities.

The improvement of the highways is helping very materially to promote the centralization of schools in the country districts whereby one institution is made to take the place of many old fashioned one-room buildings, and also to make it possible to supply more advanced and a greater variety of courses of instruction and incidentally to promote the health and general welfare of the school children.

Wherever roads have been improved statistics show that the educational facilities have been improved in proportion and there has been a marked increase in both the regularity and total attendance of school children. Census data, compared with road statistics, shows very clearly the relationship between illiteracy and bad roads. In Arkansas, Missouri, North Carolina and Mississippi, where less than two per cent of the roads are improved, there were, according to census figures, 374,788, or about five per cent, native-born white illiterates out of a population of 7,890,000. In Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and Rhode Island where more than 30 per cent of the roads are improved, there were only 20,500, or less than three-tenths of one per cent, native-born white who could not read nor write out of a population of 6,025,000.

There are many factors which contribute to illiteracy, of course, but it is highly significant to note that those sections lacking in facilities for quick and easy transportation of their inhabitants present the most lamentable showing in this respect. Improved highways will not alone result in a liberal education of any people but they are assuming an importance in that direction which should not be overlooked by those communities seeking to take forward steps in the march of progress.

The refusal of the House to accept President Wilson's view about keeping the Regular Army at a strength of 25,000 men would appear as a desire of this body to disarm criticism as its previous attitude on the disarmament proposition.

The deputy sheriffs who have been retired by Sheriff Shaw can appreciate how several times their number of "deserving Democrats" in Washington and elsewhere will feel after March 4.

There is not much evidence of price cutting in real estate in Connellsville.

Payment of the dues of sick and wounded members of the Legion does not involve a very large sum but the spirit shown by the Bishop post shows that the members have a large heart and that it is in the right place.

The city council is now confronted with the difficult task of framing and enacting an ordinance regulating the parking of chewing gum wads outside of restaurants, ice cream parlors and other places where refreshments are dispensed.

Germany must pay. Upon that the Allies are agreed. There will be no more toleration of German duplicity and falsehood. Already there have been manifested toward that criminal power a notable degree of malice. But such things cannot be drawn out indefinitely.

Germany will refuse to pay. That was a foregone conclusion. She would not otherwise be Germany. She will ave her good faith and her sincere desire to pay the fullest indemnity that she can. But she will plead poverty, and she will protest the absolute impossibility of meeting the demands which have been made. All that will be a lie. The German government knows that while as a government it may be impotent to the verge of bankruptcy. It has at its command the richest nation on the continent of Europe. It knows that the largest German industry are making huge profits and paying huge dividends on inflated capital. It knows that German citizens are plentious with wealth. It knows that if only it would tax the German people as the people of Great Britain and France are taxed, the full amount demanded by the Allies would be easily and promptly forthcoming.

It knows, too, that it deliberately refrains from thus taxing the German people for two reasons, both of them abominable in their malignity.

One is, to present a false face of poverty and thus escape through non-possession the discharging of just obligations. The other is, to keep the nations that she has despoiled impoverished and to retain and amass wealth herself, and so bring about circumstances in which she can at some future time attempt another war of conquest. The German government knows these things and if it is not as stupid as it is criminal, it knows that all the world knows them.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but substantive and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or enemals. Take two of the tablets quickly—there's no expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk" up the spirits 15c and 30c.

MBS, SYLVIA FOSTER, of Buffalo, N. Y., who says she wishes she could go into every home and tell how Tanlac completely restored her health after she had lost all hope of ever being well again.

They had given up all hope of my ever being well again but thanks to Tanlac I am feeling as well now as I ever felt in my life and I only wish had time to go to every home and tell every pick person about this grand medicine.

"A year ago last January I had a severe attack of influenza which left me in a terribly weakened condition and my appetite was so poor that I ate little more than enough to keep body and soul together.

"My heart palpitated so dreadfully at times that it seemed like it had stopped altogether and I would think my time had come. I was so weak that I couldn't go up the steps without holding to the railing. It was impossible for me to do any housework. I was so nervous that I couldn't drink my tea or coffee without spilling it.

"My sleep was restless and broken and I would have snatching spells and would just have to get up and go to the window so I could breathe.

"I finally started taking Tanlac on the advice of a friend and before I had finished taking the second bottle my neighbors could tell I was improving right along. Well, it has only taken five bottles to restore my health completely.

"My appetite is just splendid now, my nerves are strong and steady, my housework is a real pleasure, and I can sleep like a child at night. In fact, I never felt better in my life than I do now."

The above remarkable statement was made by Mrs. Sylvia Foster of 26 South Division street, Buffalo, N. Y., a well-known and highly respected resident of that city.

Tanlac is sold in Connellsville by all leading druggists.—Adv.

The Voice of the Pack

EDISON MARSHALL can keep the wolf from the house, but he can't catch it. It is a matter of time, though, before the wolf gets to the house. The wolf is a creature that usually stays away from the house, but it is drawn to it by the smell of the meat that the man has been leaving for it. The wolf is a clever creature, and it is able to find its way back to the house even if it has been tricked into going away.

"I'm sorry, Dan," she told him. "I tried so hard—"

Just one little sound broke from his throat—a strange deep gasp that could not be suppressed. Then he caught her hand in his and kissed it again and again. "Do you think I care about that?" he asked her. "I only wish I could have done more—and what I have done doesn't count. Just as in my fight with Cranston nothing counts because I didn't win. It's just fate. Snowbird. It's no one's fault, but maybe in this world nothing is ever anyone's fault." For in the twilight of those white woods, in the shadow of death itself, perhaps he was catching glimmerings of eternal truths that are hidden from all but the most far-seeing eyes.

And this is the end?" she asked him. She spoke very bravely. "No. His hand tightened on hers. "So long as a owner of strength remains, I fight—never to give up—any God-given spirit for it till the end."

And this was no idle prayer. His eyes gazed to the starry sky as he spoke.

"The son," Lemox asked him with a quiet, "what can you do?"

"Wolves aren't going to wait a week longer, and we just—"

There's one thing more—no more to make," Dan answered. "I thought about it at first, but it was too long a chance to try if there was any other way. And I suppose you thought of it too."

"Overhauling Coms out?"

"Of course. And it sounds like a day dream. But listen both of you. If we have got to die up here in the snow—and it looks like we do—then it is the thing you want done worst he can."

Lemox's hands clasped and he leaned forward on the sled. "Fix Cranston," he said.

Yes, Dan's voice rang. Coms long's never going to be paid unless we do it. There will be no signs of it. Coms' in the house, and no more. Then if our bodies in the snow and wet just be a mystery with no one made to pay. The cold lone in my pocket will be taken to Cranston some time this winter. If I don't make him pay, he never will pay. And that's a reason why I've got to try to carry out this plan. I've got the second reason is that it's the one hope we have left. I take it that none of us are deceived on that point. And no man can die tamely—it is an omen—while there's a chance. I'm a young man. I die—not one who is old and tired. It sounds perfectly silly to talk about hunting Cranstons' wolf quarters and then with my bare hands conquering him, taking his food and his blankets and his snowshoes and his rifle to fight over these wolves and bringing 'em back here."

"You wouldn't be frightened," the girl reminded him. "You could have the pistol."

"I didn't even seem to hear her. I've been thinking about it. It's a long chance—much worse than the chance we had of getting out by straight walking. I think we could have made it if the wolves had kept off and the snowshoes hadn't broken. It would have meant kill us but I believe we could have got out. That's why I didn't tell this other way. I did it in with his bare hands because I wanted to make an effort to procure their death without the least risk of their capture. In the desperation of their desire to avoid capture the wolf would be bold and remember such things as the fear of men. They said it in his face, and at last Dan had to give up, and the gray beasts waited. He shamed himself, in the shadow of that not one man died from the sled. Snowbird, what I took her pistol."

Dan's voice cracked a little. He didn't sound loudly, yet the words came so sharp and commanding, so like pistol fire itself, that Lemox pointed to her consciousness and she felt back the nervous reflexes that in her instant might have lost them all. Then there was a sob. Dan started at the wolf, and it melted into the shadows.

You won't die, Dan," Snowbird? he asked. She was dumb. But his mind was clear. He was not as filled with a pistol as she, but those nerves were breeding. The gun must be taken to fight the dogs. The three stalks must be said to the moment of their death.

No, she told him. And she strung it to his eyes. I won't do again. He believed her. He knew that she spoke truth. He met her eyes with half smile. Then wholly without words, she played his last trumpet.

As far as the wife was concerned, there was no fight, and their love span is now one broad, happy, the utter repose of the heart. The soft, soft glow she had been cracked by the heat of the day before, when running to the fire, and which she told him of her obstruction in the snow, or whether he wanted to go up the hill, was now wholly quenched, even though he had to investigate. As to all great lists, to be the result, remained the result of this case was that for now, with all which she could contrive, it all the snow was to pass by.

IMMIGRATION WILL NOT LIKELY EXCEED MILLION IN YEAR

Movement Restricted By the Carrying Capacity of Vessels.

JOHNSON BILL WON'T HELP

Stay the Jinx That Has Set in, Even It Becomes a Law, Which Does Not Seem Probable; Lack of Harmony Between State, Labor Departments.

WASHINGTON Feb. 7.—All Europe may be headed this way, but only a very small part of it is coming in 1921, says Coal Review. Immigration officials say that the population of the United States cannot gain more than 1,000,000 during the current year through immigration. They base their calculations upon the existing capacity of vessels in trans-Atlantic service. They state that the present rate of immigration is below high tide figures of pre-war days, and that there is little likelihood of additional vessels being placed into service to carry the increased number of persons desiring to come to America.

More than 1,000,000 immigrants officials state, undoubtedly will come to the United States during 1921, but the net gain, balancing departures against entries, will not exceed that figure.

The present business depression in the United States has had little or no effect in stemming the tide. Ordinarily in a dull industrial year the flow of immigration diminishes. Such is not the case at the present time. Virtually every steamship coming to America shows is packed to the gunwales.

Present indications on Capitol Hill are that there will be no immigration legislation at this session of Congress. The Johnson Bill, designed to prevent the entry into the United States of immigrants other than near relatives of families already established here, already has passed the House and is now before the Senate for action. The Senate Immigration committee is holding hearings on this bill. At a hearing last week Frederick A. Wallis, commissioner of immigration at New York, told the committee that in his opinion it would do little good, if any, to pass the Johnson measure.

Virtually all immigrants admitted to the country at the present time, Mr. Wallis stated, are relatives of other immigrants who have become established in the United States. Passage of the Johnson bill would not exclude this class of immigration, he said.

On the other hand officials of the Labor Department feel that passage of the Johnson bill might let down the bars to undesirable immigrants now denied admission to the United States. They fear that possibly the court might construe the Johnson bill, if enacted into law, as superseding, to great extent, existing regulations.

Under the law today the commissioner of immigration is empowered to bar undesirables from the United States. The admittance of these undesirables might be construed as mandatory in case it should be found that they were relatives of immigrant families already established here.

It is also feared by department officials that passage of the Johnson measure might tend to weaken or to lessen the requirements of literacy now provided for.

The best way to get a desirable class of immigrants, in the view of Labor Department officials would be to inspect them on the other side. This, however, is regarded as practically impossible. Foreign governments have repeatedly intimated their desire for this sort of proceeding. They regard it as a violation, to some extent, of their sovereignty and have discouraged all attempts undertaken even informally, to inspect deportees from their respective territories.

There would appear to be little likelihood of this government being able to station agents abroad who might tag one man as a desirable immigrant and another as undesirable. The way has changed the feeling of foreign governments in this respect to some extent, but not enough, it is thought, to permit of that.

The recent report of the House Committee on Immigration is regarded by Department of Labor officials as containing information somewhat unwaranted.

They point out, for instance, that from only one country is an inferior quality of immigration coming today to the United States. That country is Poland. Arrivals from Poland—and it is understood that 311,000 applications for passports from Poles desiring to go to the United States are on file abroad—are not up to pre-war standards. Many of the Poles immigrating to the United States today are refugees, with but a percentage of Jews. In a large number of instances it is found that the immigrant is undernourished and that his physical stand does not measure up to that of other nationalities. It is not, however, that a few months in this country with proper nourishment and education would do much to correct the Poles' shortcomings.

The statement that a heavy percentage of all immigration is of Scotch origin is due to Department of Labor officials. They state that the quality of human coming to American shores, at the present time, is about the same as it was before the war, except that there is a preponderance of one country with the exception of Poland. The Italian proportion, they say, is larger than in the days before the war, but the others are about the same. But the Italian government has notified the American government it is prepared to do whatever it can to withdraw its citizens from such drastic action should it do this to the country.

It is believed that there is a distinct friction of feelings between the Labor Department and the State Department about immigration. The Labor Department is of the view that the State Department is one which always come

Wraps Warm to the Soul

EVERY young woman likes to feel once in a while at least, that she looks really regal, that if fate had made her a queen she could look the part. Hence, therefore, is the possessor of a night evening coat with which can reinforce whatever claim she may possess for queenliness.

Evening wraps enfold the figure wherever they follow and cover everything about them in ample, the coat at the left of the two shown above has long wide sleeves, plenty of fullness in the body and a deep cape collar of white fur. It is made of one of the shaggy silk materials which the manufacturers of woven furs have turned out, showing what the looms can do when they work in dependent of imitations. Dangereuse in beige or turquoise, lined with a heavy rose-colored satin.
